AQUATEKO INVISIBLE SWIVELS

InvisiSwivel is a clear fishing swivel that was developed for the avid fisherman. The stealth design is invisible in water. Fish cannot see the swivel like conventional metal swivels that are heavy and corrode. The space age material they are made from actually promotes the free spinning and unlike conventional swivels they can be bent hundreds of times and show no signs of fatigue.

AQUATEK KNOT 2 KINKY WIRE

Knot 2 Kinky wire is a superelastic alloy which can be stretched and bent at least ten times more than ordinary steel leaders without permanent deformation. The perfect formula of Nickel and Titanium alloys creates a superelastic property to this leader. This allows a fish to apply an enormous bite that will then stretch the Knot 2 Kinky wire and then recover, where steel would snap.

SEBILE A.T.

WORM

First, the A.T. Worm's head is especially thick compared to the average worm, and it is hollow from its tail to its nose. The fact it is hollow permits the material to possess a certain kind of toughness and resilience that would not be possible otherwise. So the A.T. is tougher and really lasts longer than the average worm although thanks to the hollow body, the feeling and action is that of a very soft, supple plastic.

SEBILE D & S CRANK

Unique patent pending design, Gravity Snagless Hook System, allows the hook to pivot on an internal pin creating a snagless crankbait. When retrieved the hook point remains inline with the bait's flattened tail until a fish strikes. The hook then goes upward freeing the point to penetrate the mouth. The pivoting hook and tail on the body lock the fish's lip in place until the angler grabs the fish.

WILLIAM JOSEPH SQUALL PACKABLE RAIN JACKET

This was our first foray into the world of outerwear. Originally, it was intended just for us, as we could not find a decent rain jacket that was substantial enough for some un-expected precipitation, yet light enough to stow when not needed. Seven years later this jacket still fits the bill perfectly and remains as one of our top sellers.

BEADHEAD

NYMPHS

One of the most successful ways to fish for trout is with fly fishing patterns of nymphs. The brass-colored bead head adds a critical bit of flash to the fly and the weight of the brass bead helps keep the fly very close to the bottom where trout are used to seeing and capturing naturals.

CHIRONOMIDS

Chironomids are mosquito-like insects that inhabit every watershed that will support trout. They are the most widely dispersed aquatic insect generation. In many lakes and slower streams huge populations of these insects make them the most prolific food source for trout, bass and pan fish.

CADDIS FLIES

The caddis fly is recognized by their bouncing, erratic flight over trout streams and rivers. Unlike the mayfly and stonefly, the caddis are available to the brown and rainbow trout as a food in four stages: the larva stage, whether in or out of a case, the pupa stage, as an adult, and as an adult female in the ovipositing stage. The four different stages show how important the caddis is as a food supply for trout. They probably represents half the trout regular diet in the streams and rivers that they inhabit.

WET FLIES

80 percent of all food eaten by trout is taken under the surface of the water making soft-hackle flies one of the best ways to fool these selective feeders. Wet flies can be tied in many different forms but generally these types of flies mimic larvae, pupa, and drowned adult insects.

TERRESTRIALS

Terrestrials are most summer fly angler's favorite type of flies to fish. These patterns try and imitate the local terrestrial insects in your area. This group of patterns includes grasshoppers, beetles, mice and ants. Terrestrial patterns are capable of landing many different species of fish and are especially successful in the warmer months of summer (July-August), when the aquatic insect hatches are fewer in numbers.

NYMPHS

Nymph fly patterns are created to imitate immature forms of aquatic insects. These patterns are generally very realistic containing several sets of legs, antennae, and even tiny sets of eyes. A good bet is if there are no signs of insects on the water's surface and you cannot see insects drifting in the water column then you should look to the nymph.

STREAMERS

Blacknose Dace

Streamers are fly patterns that imitate the larger sources of food for trout, which are baitfish and leeches. Essentially streamers concentrate on the many different types of minnows that inhabit streams like sculpins, chubs, and darters along with some fry patterns of the resident trout. Streamers patterns are some of your best flies for catching big trout.

In over 50 scientific side by side trials (different braid constructions, line diameters, automatic/human testers) Sufix 832 braided line containing GORE® Performance Fibers cast further than the lines with no GORE® Performance Fibers over 92% of the time.

Gore's knowledge in advanced materials combined with Sufix's expertise in fishing line manufacturing and the ground breaking R8 precision braiding has created the ultimate in advanced superline... Sufix 832. Constructed of 8 fibers and 32 weaves (pics) per inch creates the toughest, most durable, small diameter braid on the market. Smooth line release during casting results in more consistent, longer casting distances.

STRADIC® FJ

NEW

With Shimano's X-Ship double bearing supported pinion gear, anglers will experience increased gearing efficiency and power, providing for ultra-light handle rotation. By supporting the pinion gear with two A-RB ball bearings X-Ship provides a smooth, effortless retrieve and also virtually eliminates the pinion gear twist and rotor flex common with most spinning reels when fighting a fish.

AERO WRAP II

Aero Wrap II is a worm gear oscillation system that provides uniform line lay and winding shape to prevent loss of energy during the casts.

PROPULSION

Propulsion Line Management System provides longer casts, with less effort, while drastically reducing the chance of backlash, wind knots or tangles.

PALADIN GEARS

Cold forged Paladin gears on the drive gear, spools and handles offer unbelievable strength with minimal amount of material reducing weight.
